“If we are to teach real peace in this world, we shall have to begin with the children.” Mahandas Gandhi

Restorative practices are innovative ways to:

- Build caring communities around students whilst not accepting harmful behaviour… in other words, supporting people taking responsibility for their actions and repair any harm that has been done.
- Recognise and encourage the contributions that staff, parents, carers and the community make in promoting great relationships that enable better behaviour and better learning at school.
- Involve all those affected by the conflict to find a way forward, reducing anger and resentments.

The Presenter

Marg Armstrong is a teacher of 30 years who has for the past 10 years been working with schools implementing restorative practices across Victoria, South Australia, Queensland and Tasmania. In 2004 she was awarded a Churchill Fellowship to research restorative practices in schools internationally. She is the current Vice President of the Victorian Association for Restorative Justice and is an inaugural board member of Restorative Practices International. She works as a private consultant.
